Housing, schools lack cited

Navy move blocked

WASHINGTON, D.C.—U.S. Navy District Judge-Gerhard A. Gesell said Friday the Navy had failed to make an adequate study of the environmental impact on the Naval Oceanographic Center transfer to Hancock County, and ordered the move halted.

Speaking in Washington, Gesell said the Navy ignored questions concerning adequate housing and schools, especially for low and moderate income groups and racial minority, for the 1,300 civilians involved in the transfer when they chose the Mississippi site. He censured Navy and other officials for compromising regulations concerning the gathering of vital data affecting the move.

"If the national environmental policy act is allowed to be a mere formality which busy bureaucrats treat as an annoyance rather than as a vital aid in true decision making, the clear intent of Congress will be frustrated," the judge said in handing down the injunction.

He continued, "It is not a matter of doing paperwork to satisfy form, it is rather a matter of placing before the decision maker, ever conscious of efficiency and cost the equal, if not greater need to weigh factors affecting the quality of life on this overcrowded and rapidly deteriorating continent."

Though he did not halt plans for a possible future transfer, Judge Gesell did order Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld to review the plan again after the Navy prepared a new environmental impact statement.

Russ Greenbaum, public affairs officer for NOAA at NSTL, said late Friday his office will not know until Monday how the ruling will affect relocation operations currently in progress.

"It's a matter of what the injunction applies to," Greenbaum said. "Some employees have already relocated, some are enroute, and some have been ordered to move. We won't know until later exactly what the cut-off point is."

Greenbaum said approximately 50 employees with the Naval Oceanographic Research and Development Activity (NORDA) and NAVOCEANO have moved to communities in the NSTL area, and about one third of them have moved their families to Hancock County.

He said he is unsure how the injunction will affect the approximate 35 families who were expected to arrive in the area this week.

Greenbaum said extensive building modifications have already occurred at NSTL to make room for the arriving Navy operations.

Modifications to Building 8100, have been completed, he said, and "moving walls around and rearranging space for our needs" continues in other buildings.

He said some of the employees of the agencies originally at the NSTL site are currently in "temporary" quarters, as are many of the Navy personnel.

L&N withdraws petition to close Bay St. Louis

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad has withdrawn its petition seeking authority to serve the Bay St. Louis and Hancock agency station out of the Gulfport station on a parttime or qualified basis, according to a communique this week from the state Public Service Commission.

The commission allowed the petition to be withdrawn without prejudice, meaning that the L&N is free to refile the petition at a later time if it so desires.

The application had been opposed by the Hancock Chamber of Commerce and other groups as being injurious to industrialists and others in the county that utilized the Hancock agency. Southern District Commissioner John Dale also said he would fight to see that the commission did not approve the petition.

The L&N stated in its petition that the application was being sought as a money and manpower saving gesture because of limited use of the Hancock station.

It was the second such petition filed by the L&N in the past year, and the second time that the petition had been withdrawn by the L&N after meeting local opposition.

Pass council votes to appeal prisoner charge ruling

The Pass Christian city council held a special meeting Thursday night and voted to file an intention to appeal a recent chancery court ruling which required the city to pay almost $6,000 in prisoner charges to the Harrison County board of supervisors.

When filing the suit against the county, Mayor Steve Saucier said the city would not pay the $6,000 because the billing by the supervisors was a form of "double taxation."

However, he said Friday that the council will negotiate with the supervisors to determine an "acceptable" sum for payment.

Recently, two Pass Christian prisoners were jailed in the Hancock County jail after the Harrison County supervisors refused to jail the city's prisoners charged with minor offenses until the back payments were made.

Constituents invited to meet with legislators

State Representative-elect J.P. Compretta and State Senator Martin Smith will hold a series of joint meetings with their constituents Saturday, Dec. 13 throughout Hancock County and the Bay-Waveland area.

The two said that the public meetings were being held so that voters could air their feelings on any legislation that they might be interested in or simply ask questions prior to the start of the upcoming session of the legislature Jan. 6.

The following schedule covers the times and places of the Saturday meetings:

Kilm—meeting will take place in the Farm Bureau Office from 9 a.m. until 9:45 a.m.

Pearlington—meeting will take place at Charles B. Murphy School from 10 a.m. until 10:45 a.m.

Lakeshore-Clermont area—meeting will be held in Gulfview School from 11 a.m. until noon.

Bay-Waveland area—meeting will be held at Seafide's Wheel Inn on U.S. 90 from 1:30 until 2:30 p.m.

Quiet sea death

Guests of Gulf Chemical Company watch from the charter boat Bacuna Thursday afternoon as workers from International Demolition & Salvage Company prepare the WWII Liberty Ship S.S. George Gershwin for a quiet sea burial 12 miles southeast of Horn Island. It was the second hull sunk by International under the auspices of the Mississippi Marine Commission. The Gershwin and four other hulls are being sunk off the Gulf Coast to create artificial fishing reefs for sport fishermen.

In wake of Pearl Harbor

Enterprise vet recounts Santa Cruz battle

On Monday, Oct. 26, 1942, approximately 10 months after the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor, the carrier USS Enterprise was attacked by Japanese planes during the Battle of Santa Cruz. Heavy damage was sustained but the Enterprise survived and the story of another survivor of that battle is as engrossing as any we have heard.

It is told by Edmund George Johnston, a native of Bay St. Louis and now a resident of Long Beach, Miss. A 19-year-old aviation mechanic on the Enterprise at the time, Johnston's story bears retelling, we feel, on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Here is his first person account.

USS Enterprise CV-6. My job was that of a plane captain, riding my SBD aircraft of Bombing Squadron 10 back to be spotted for take off.

I was passing the number one elevator on the port side and the left wing top of the SBD was over the numbers one and three five-inch gun galley. The plane handlers in the galley cried out "Enemy planes overhead." Looking up I saw a small speck of a plane as it turned over into a dive. At this time the plane was almost overhead over the port bow at approximately 20,000 feet.

I started to get out of the SBD cockpit, but realized my aircraft had not been checked. Sitting back down in the plane I tried to set my parking brakes. Thinking I had secured the lock of the brakes I sprang out of the plane and upon looking up found that the plane was a little closer and a second enemy plane had turned over into a dive following the leader.

The ship's guns were starting to fire. Realizing again the parking brakes were not holding, I dropped back into the cockpit of the SBD. As I started to leave again I found the brakes would not hold so I had to settle in the cockpit.

The Enterprise was turning hard to starboard and the SBD was starting to roll to starboard. As the enemy was now banking his plane as if to get the SBD in his sight, the ship was hard into the starboard turn. I let the SBD roll to starboard a little hitting my left brake to swing the tail of the SBD to port.

The Val dive bomber of the Japanese Navy was getting closer, and I could see the bomb under his belly. I felt the Jap had me in his sights so I let the SBD roll a little. Again I applied the left then the right brakes. The Val let his bomb go, and he seemed to be following it down. From the size of a baseball to the size of a medicine ball I watched it grow.

As the enemy started to pull out of its dive, (he must have been under a thousand feet) I realized the bomb was going to hit me. I started a prayer, the Act of Contrition, and pushed as hard as I could on the SBD right and left brakes. My prayer was only started "O my God" then the most terrific explosion I have ever heard occurred.

E.G. JOHNSTON

The bomb hole of hit No. 1 was almost under my plane at the trailing edge of the SBD port wing and fuselage. When the bomb partly exploded on the hangar deck it sent shrapnel back through the flight deck, putting 22 holes in my SBD from the size of a penny to the size of a large man's fist.

Telford A. Johnson from Des Moines, Iowa, and Claude C. Clegg from Clarksdale, Mississippi came on the flight deck during the attack. They choked my plane and tied it down because they were afraid it would roll into the ship's guns. When the attack was over they warned me to be careful as the bomb's hole was right where I was about to step off the trailing edge of the port wing.

According to the confidential damage report from the Commanding Officer of the Enterprise to the Chief of the Bureau of Ships dated Nov. 8, 1942 and among several interesting documents in Johnston's possession, the Enterprise was attacked by an estimated 34 Japanese planes that day including Japanese torpedo planes and dive bombers. The carrier suffered two direct bomb hits and a number of near misses, two of which were close enough to penetrate the ship's side and cause flooding.

Perhaps the most interesting part of Johnston's story though has unfolded since that day in November. Being a student of history, Johnston's interest in the battle was aroused again after reading the book "ZERO FIGHTER" by Masatake Okumura and Jiro Harukoshi.

Writing to the Japanese ambassador to the U.S. at Washington, D.C., on July 7, 1943 Johnston expressed his admiration of the Japanese pilot whose hit had been so perfect and whose name he had learned almost 21 years later.

Wrote Johnston "I honestly didn't think a man of his skill could be killed. I had hopes of meeting him after the war as I felt he would like to know where his bomb hit."

"I refused to believe a Marine on a gun," Johnston continued in the letter, "who told me he hit the leader as he was leaving. Now almost 21 years later I learned that Lt. Masao Yamaguchi was the leader and was missing after the first

Gershwin accomplishes final mission with dignity

Making one final salute to the world she had known above water, the World War II Liberty ship S.S. George Gershwin stood on her stern and then ever so slowly slipped beneath the sea Thursday taking her final resting place 12 miles Southeast of Horn Island in the Mississippi Sound.

The Gershwin thus became the second such hull to be salvaged and then "retired" to create an artificial fishing reef for the Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission.

Both the Gershwin and a former ship, the S.S. Benjamin Waterhouse, were cut down and scrapped to an 11-foot water line by International Demolition & Salvage Company, operating out of the Port Bienville Industrial Park in Hancock County.

The Gershwin disappeared below the surface at 2:46 p.m.—exactly 31 minutes after workers for International cut two gaping holes at the water line through the steel hull and opened seacocks inside the hull.

International president Bruce Purcell and other employees and business associates of International alternately cheered and philosophized as they watched the scuttle from the charter boat Becuna, hired for the occasion by the Gulf Chemical Company of Metairie, La.

The location of the hull was marked by two buoys, one lighted, and anchored with chain from the Gershwin herself.

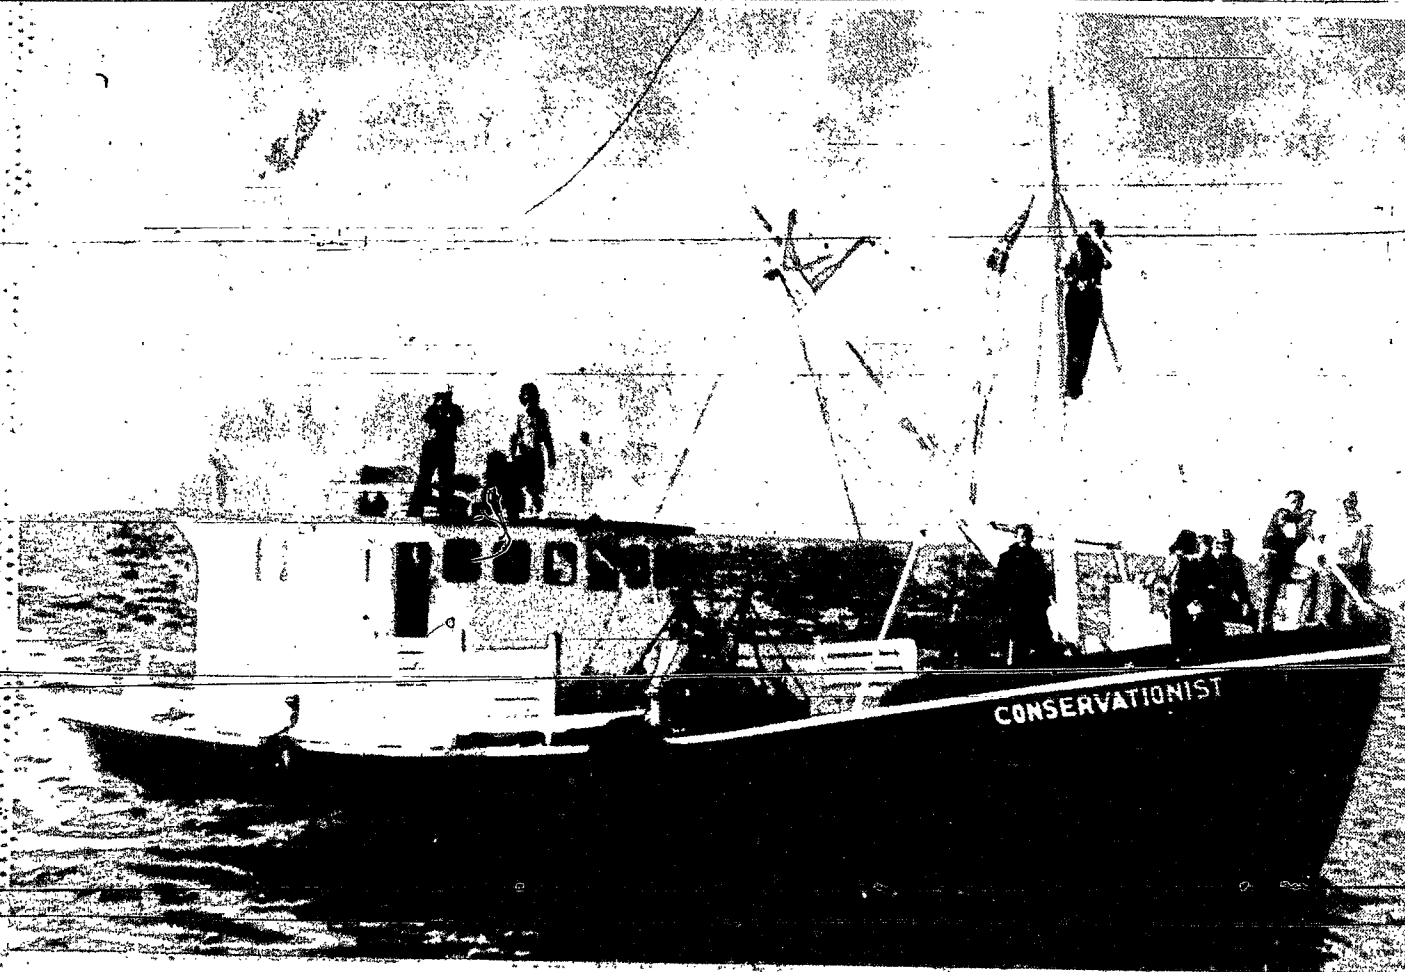

Fishing around the hull will probably be good in approximately one year, according to representatives of the Gulf Fishing Banks Association, an original sponsor of the project.

International has three more of the Liberty ships which it is readying for similar sinkings in the Gulf. Purcell said that a third ship was ready to go and a fourth would be ready by the end of December.

Members of MS Marine Conservation

International president

The sea rushed in . . .

The sea rushed in almost mercifully Thursday after seacocks were opened and holes were cut into the steel bulkheads of the Gershwin—now a rusting remnant of the past as it sits on the ocean floor, a haven for fish instead of men.

One final gasp . . .

One final gasp as the sea took another to her bosom Thursday ending the saga of the S.S. George Gershwin—at least as far as the annals of Naval warfare is concerned. She will still go on serving men in a peacetime mission though—as she provides cover for Mississippi game fish.

License tag check

Flashing blue lights and sheriff's deputies greeted motorists on Second Street in front of City Hall Wednesday as the Hancock County Sheriff's Office staged its second consecutive day of license tag and driver's license inspection. Sheriff Sylvan Ladner said 14 tickets at $30 each for expired driver's licenses and incorrect tags were issued the first day. Here, deputy Ronnie Peterson reminds a motorist that her tag should go on the rear of her car rather than in the back seat.

"I write this letter in sorrow with the highest respect for this man and his family. It may benefit his nearest kin to know of his glorious last moments. He made the best direct hit on the USS Enterprise CV-6, the world's most outstanding warship in all the Navy's annals."

Johnston's letter was answered promptly with a thank you and a note that the embassy would try to locate Yamaguchi's family to convey the essence and spirit of Johnston's letter. To his surprise nearly one year later, Johnston received two letters forwarded from the Japanese Embassy—one from Mrs. Kazuko Yamaguchi and one from the oldest son, Akira Yamaguchi born Dec. 13, 1941.

The letters from Mrs. Yamaguchi and her son were full of grateful appreciation.
"Today, 21 years after my husband died," Mrs. Yamaguchi wrote, "I could for the first time find out how my husband breathed his last."

"The touching feelings which remain in human hearts forever are the same all over the world."
"Tears ran from my eyes ceaselessly not because I was sad but because I was overwhelmed with gratitude, when you wrote that you could understand the situation by reading 'ZERO FIGHTER'. This is the exact proof that the human heart is the same, notwithstanding nationality or race."

The seeds of friendship were laid and the Yamaguchis and Johnstons have corresponded many times over the interim years. Pictures have been exchanged, of Akira's wedding, of births, of holidays, and a renewed faith has been given us all that in the human heart exists the hope of all mankind.

Perhaps the words of Akira express that hope best: "As a young man on whose shoulders rest the destinies of Japan and as a member of free nations, I would like to do my best for the peace of the world. I should like to be a friend to the people of your country."

THE WORDS may be found up, down, diagonally, backward, or forward in the block of letters. Find and mark in the following:

"The man who minds his business usually has a good one."

A. A.

Frenchman de Tocqueville said one of America's greatest strengths is our ability to repair ourselves. I say this new year is a time to repair ourselves, our businesses and our great country.

How do we go about this really big job? I say by thinking deep, hard, and long.

You see, everything was once an idea—even you! Remember that as you encourage ideas—yours and others—on how to whip inflation, cut costs, build sales, and improve life.

We'll all be struggling and scrambling in the seventies—but those who use their brain power effectively and efficiently will score quicker, I predict.

Okay! We all agree we have problems—or opportunities—now how do we (you) go about managing and solving the challenges every human being has today?

Well, as Shakespeare said, "There's majesty in simplicity." So, let's keep it simple.

Here, briefly are the steps to solid solution finding:

• Define the problem. "A problem well-stated is a problem half-solved." One of my students in a creative management development seminar I conducted had a very real dilemma: "I'm in love with two girls," he confided. "I don't know which one to marry," he said.

"Bill," I counseled, "Your first problem is not whether to marry Pat or Barbara, but whether you should marry at all..." (Bill is now married to Judy—and they have a mighty happy family). "What's the R-E-A-L problem?" is the first question to ask.

• Break big problems into little ones. History is jammed with examples of how inventors used this proven method. General Motors' great inventor "Boss" Kettering was faced with engine knock—a big problem. Kettering noted his fellow workers were studying the engine. So, breaking the problem into pieces, Kettering examined the fuel going into the engine. It had caused the knock. So Kettering helped create ethyl gasoline!

• List as many alternatives as you can think of. One behavior I always watch for in my career and management counseling work is to see if the manager is flexible and fluent in idea production. You see a quantity of ideas will eventually lead to quality ideas. Think how many experiments Edison tried before the lights went on!

• To gain balanced thinking, weigh the pros and cons of each possible answer. Mature thinking demands that we try to see both the good and the not so good in a situation requiring creativity and innovation.

As a newspaper cub reporter, I learned (the hard way) to try always to be objective. And that's tough to do, my Pulitzer Prize winning editors taught me to understand.

• Use that "gold mine between your ears." Turn on your mind power and dream and perceive the problem as already solved. You know, there's a solution to every problem. So start visualizing possible solutions. What the mind can see and believe, it can conceive.

• Challenge the obvious. But never lose sight of the invisibility of the obvious. The ability to see the obvious... then go beyond it... then return to it... these are the behaviors of a thinking person.

• Take action. The late Dr. Alex Osborn, a great friend and my top teacher, always said: "Act! Do something with your ideas. Put them to work for you know. Sell them. Give them away. But do something with them—today!"

Yep! It's time to think, think, think. Use that mind you carry with you 24 hours a day—every day!

Meetings set to discuss recycling

Gulf Regional Planning Commission will conduct a series of public meetings in Hancock, Harrison and Jackson Counties Dec. 17-18 to discuss solid waste resource recovery, or recycling, for the Mississippi Gulf Coast. The hearing for Hancock County will be held in the Supervisors Board Room at the courthouse Dec. 17 at 9 a.m.

Purpose of the meeting is to inform the public of the objectives of the resource recovery program for the three counties, and to get comments from private and public sectors interested in the program.

Persons wishing to make formal statements at the meeting should have at least one written copy of the statement available for submission to the record at the time of the meeting. Those wishing to comment, but unable to attend, should submit their statements to the Gulf Regional Planning Commission, P. O. Box 4206, Gulfport, MS, 39501, for inclusion in the record.

Similar meetings will be held Dec. 17 at 2 p.m. at the Harrison County Supervisors Board Room in Gulfport and Dec. 18 at 1 p.m. at the Jackson County Supervisor's Board Room in Pascagoula.

Hancock County students have been named to honor rolls for the fall quarter at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Listed on the President's list, the top academic honor, are Russell Wallace, Chapman, Carolyn Anne Phillips, and Nancy Wolfe all of Bay St. Louis; and Cheryl Ann Goetz, Waveland.

Named to the Dean's List were Elizabeth Edith Chevis, Ann Victoria Miller, David Michael Necaice, Bryan Ervin Acker, Wayne Phillip Ducomb Jr., Lawrence Anthony Farve, Ronald John Genin, Janelle Marie Ladner, Virginia Aline Milazzo, and Peter James Scianna, all of Bay St. Louis.

Also Myra Ann Steffel, Marcel Anthony Vaneerd, Paul William Wood, and Motie Gail Longo, all of Waveland.

Extension service tells job openings

Five jobs for County Extension 4-H youth agents and a position for a County home economist are available in various areas of the state, according to Dr. W. M. Host, director, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service (MCES).

The 4-H youth agent jobs are in Claiborne County, bachelor's degree in agriculture required; Waltham County, bachelor's degree in home economics required; George County, bachelor's degree in agriculture required; and Attala County, bachelor's degree in home economics required. Extension offices in the above counties are in Port Gibson, Tylertown, Lumberton, Tunica, and Kosciusko, respectively.

The home economist position is in Benton County.

Harrison County Supervisors Board Room in Gulfport and Dec. 18 at 1 p.m. at the Jackson County Supervisor's Board Room in Pascagoula.

Court of honor lauds boy scouts

A recent Court of Honor was held in Pass Christian to announce rank promotions and present awards to members of Boy Scout Troop 316.

Those boys promoted to Scout rank included Darrell Hayden, Vernon Wimberly, Douglas Tougent, Wally Farragut, Steve Farragut, Tarrell Bang, and Greg Peacock.

Promoted to Tenderfoot were Scott Stewart, Drew Alston, Larry Hopkins, and Jeremy Govan.

Second Class promotions went to Bill Sadler and Steve Brockway. Alvin Brockway was promoted to First Class, David Brockway promoted to Star, and John Snyder promoted to Silver Eagle Palm.

A total of 28 skill awards and 17 merit badges were presented to scout members for the work they completed since August, 1975.

One year pins were awarded to Dean Garrett, Mike Hannah, and Andy Boudreaux. Two year pins went to Jim Johanson and David Brockway, while third year pins were received by Alvin Brockway and John Snyder, who was also awarded a three year attendance pin.

Matt Alston and Pat Frisby received four year pins and the five year pin recipient was Jim Snyder.

Those receiving recruiter patches were William Floyd, Dean Garrett, Mike Hannah, and Jim Johanson.

At a dinner following the Court of Honor, scout master Bob Johanson was presented a Pine Burr Council Fall Roundup mug for his leadership in rebuilding Troop 316.

Your local Army Reserve Center will show you a list of available jobs. They'll help you pick one you want. And after a few months of training, they'll put you to work in your hometown.

THE ARMY RESERVE IT PAYS TO GO TO MEETINGS.

Seminars planned for state nurses

Mississippi's 125 Occupational Health Nurses are participating in four unique training sessions dealing with Employee Assistance Programs. This series of workshops is the first of its kind in the nation specifically designed for Occupational Health Nurses.

The three-day seminars are being sponsored by the Division of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism of the Mississippi Department of Mental Health, the University of Mississippi School of Nursing, and the University of Mississippi Medical Center Division of Continuing Health. The first of the four sessions was held November 5-7 in Jackson. Other seminars are scheduled for January 21-23 in Tupelo, February 18-20 in Gulfport, and March 10-12 in Jackson.

FROM AN ALTITUDE OF FOUR FEET
Have you ever wondered what children think about grownups? Perhaps the following dozen complaints from a Sunday School class of ten-year-olds in Brookside, New Jersey will help you see things from their altitude. It will probably hurt a little, but it could be very helpful to us and our children.

■ What's wrong with grownups? A Sunday School class of ten-year-olds in Brookside, N. J., expressed the following complaints about adults. Try looking at these from an altitude of four feet.

1. Grownups make promises, then they forget all about them, or else they say it wasn't really a promise, just a maybe.
2. Grownups don't do the things they're always telling children to do—like pick up their things, or be neat, or always tell the truth.
3. Grownups won't let their children dress the way they want to—but they never ask a child's opinion about how they should dress. If they're going out to a party, grownups wear just exactly what they want to wear—even if it looks terrible, even if it isn't warm enough.
4. Grownups never really listen to what children have to say. They always decide ahead of time what they're going to answer.
5. Grownups make mistakes but they won't admit them. They always pretend that they weren't mistakes at all—or that somebody else made them.
6. Grownups interrupt children all the time and think nothing of it. If a child interrupts a grownup, he gets a scolding or something worse.
7. Grownups never understand how much children want a certain thing—a certain color or shape or size. If it's something they don't admire—even if the children have spent their own money for it—they always say, "I can't imagine what you want with that old thing!"
8. Sometimes grownups punish children unfairly. It isn't right if you've done just some little thing wrong and grownups take away something that means an awful lot to you. Other times you can do something really bad and they say they're going to punish you, but they don't. You never know, and you ought to know.
9. Grownups talk about money too much, and bills, and things like that, so that it scares you. They say money isn't very important, but the way they talk about it, it sounds like the most important thing in the world.
10. Grownups gossip a lot—but if children do the very same thing and say the same words about the same people, the grownups say they're being disrespectful.
11. Grownups pry into children's secrets. They always think it's going to be something bad. They never think it might be a nice surprise.
12. Grownups are always talking about what they did and what they knew when they were ten years old—and it usually sounds as if it couldn't have happened the way they say. But grownups never try to think what it's like to be ten years old right now.

Wildlife group sues federal agencies

The National Wildlife Federation (NWF) has filed suit in U.S. District Court to force the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to curb ocean dumping of material dredged from river and harbor bottoms—the major source of avoidable marine pollution.

The suit, filed in the District Court for the District of Columbia, charges the two government agencies with failure to implement provisions of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972, or the "Ocean Dumping Law," that prohibit dumping which would "unreasonably degrade or endanger human health...or the marine environment."

The NWF also alleges that the agencies are in violation of an international treaty on ocean dumping.

"We are not seeking a complete ban on ocean dumping or trying to deny the Corps all options for disposing of dredged materials," said Thomas L. Kimball, NWF executive vice president. "We simply want the Corps to follow the law's criteria and consider a proper balance between environmental and economic values before approving dumping proposals."

"We would like to see the Corps consider land disposal and recycling alternatives whenever practicable," he added. "The ocean is too important a global resource to be used indiscriminately as a dumping ground."

Under the provisions of the 1972 law, the Corps may approve ocean dumping of "spoils," or dredged material, only after findings have been made that the dumping will not present an undue risk to the marine environment or human health. The Federation alleges in its suit that EPA and the Corps failed to "develop legally sufficient regulatory criteria for evaluating proposals to ocean-dump dredged materials."

The ocean dumping of dredge spoil amounts to approximately 240 billion pounds each year, or 90 percent of all U.S. ocean dumping, according to Federation attorney Kenneth S. Kamlet.

"Although dredge spoil is basically natural sediment dredged up from harbor and river bottoms, it cannot be heaped into the sea without major environmental impacts," said Kamlet, a biologist as well as lawyer. "Much of the spoil is heavily polluted with accumulated sewage and chemical wastes that have been discharged into our inland waterways for decades."

The NWF attorney noted that dredge spoil dumping results in direct destruction of swimming, floating and bottom-dwelling marine organisms and interferes with life-giving photosynthesis through clouding of the water. In addition, polluted dredged material can threaten fish.

Gex named marine counsel

Lucien M. Gex, Waveland, has been named attorney for the Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission, replacing State Sen. Sandy Steckler who resigned last November.

Ray Bordages and Ducre Bourgeois, both of Hancock County, made the motion to employ Gex at a commission meeting Monday. There was no public discussion of any other candidate, and Clyde Bosarge, Pascagoula, who abstained from voting was the only commission member not in favor of the motion.

The new attorney is expected to be paid a retainer of $250 per month, in addition to other fees for court appearances.

Gex, 42, has served as attorney for the city of Waveland since 1965.

Skates, tricycles, dolls, toy cars and trucks are the things that make Christmas special for young children, but those popular playthings can also cause some serious injuries.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, 150,000 people a year receive hospital emergency room treatment for injuries associated with toys. Falls are the most frequent type of accident, but serious problems often result from children swallowing small parts or putting tiny toys in their noses or ears, from gas-powered or flammable playthings and toys with sharp edges.

The Safety Commission has banned more than 1,500 hazardous toys from the market, but each year 5,000 new toys become available to consumers. Despite the efforts of manufacturers, retailers and inspectors, it is impossible to examine every single toy, and therefore, shoppers should be aware of toy safety when making those important Christmas purchases.

Buy toys that suit the skills and abilities of each child. Avoid toys that are too complex for youngsters.

Explain to the child how to use his new toys, and always try to supervise youngsters while they play.

To report a hazardous toy or toy-related injury, contact the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Rutledge of Bay St. Louis announce the birth of their third child and second daughter, Amy Rebecca. She was born Nov. 18 at Gulfport Memorial Hospital and weighed seven and one half pounds.

Mrs. Rutledge is the former Millie Church, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Church, Bay St. Louis. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rutledge, Pinehurst, N.C.

Honor roll corrected

The name of Miss Rhonda Seal was inadvertently omitted from the list of Hancock North Central Elementary honor roll students for the fifth grade. Miss Seal's grades were all 'A's'.

Garden club plans hat show

Members of the Bay-Waveland Garden Club will provide their own entertainment in the form of a hat show at their Dec. 11 meeting.

Mrs. Herman Mazarakis, first vice president and program chairman, has completed the following schedule for the 2 p.m. meeting.

Class I, Deck the Halls-Go all out in decorating a large hat. Emphasis is on natural materials; but bows, baubles, etc. may be used.

Class II, Little Drummer Boy-This small chapeau should be just as gay as the tune it symbolizes. Fresh and or dried materials are acceptable and accessories may be used.

Class III, Partridge in a Pear Tree-Unique is the byword for this category. Actually, the more unusual, the better.

Class IV, Silver Bells-Bells may or may not be used for the Christmas corsage. Judging will be based upon originality in use of natural materials, with or without accessories.

Mrs. Mazarakis said judges will be selected from members not entering the hat show. She said there will be a Christmas tree, but members are not to bring gifts for exchange. They are, however, asked to bring a potted plant which are traditionally distributed to Senior Citizens as part of the Garden Therapy project.
